DATA PROTECTION ACT

The Data Protection Act of 1998, which implements the EU Protection directive, is now fully in force. The Department needs, for necessary administration, to store information chiefly on paper or in computers about its individual members. Rudimentary information, including lists of names, e-mail addresses, room numbers, room phone numbers, research topics and photographs, has been communicated to others by means of the web, notice boards, phone books etc. Information concerning homes and families has not been divulged. These habits have caused no troubles and have enhanced smooth relationships with the rest of the world; I hope they can continue. Now however everyone must give consent. Accordingly I should be grateful if you would complete and return the following form.
